DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Campbell (US 2004/0210525) in view of Maners (US 6,507,826).

Regarding claims 1 and 6, Campbell discloses a system/method for online billing that includes means for/steps of connecting to a web-based interface for signing into a billing system by a user (abstract, par. 27, par. 29), verifying a check sheet to determine the accuracy of the check sheet (par. 29, performs verification by comparing billing data 40 with data listing 142 and displays a screen confirming data), issuing an account statement (par. 30, invoice lists client and provider data), and generating an invoice (par. 30, software generates an invoice). The system also includes printing means (par. 30) that could be used to print various documents, such as a check sheet, and means for forwarding and generating various files.

The invention Campbell differs from the claimed invention in that it does not explicitly show examining the authority of a user or the user to be a supplier.

Maners discloses a system/method for online billing that discloses examining the authority of a user (col. 6 line 32-36, determines if user is authorized). Furthermore, a variety of entities (suppliers, billing services, vendors, etc.) could use the system/method without affecting the nature or functioning of the invention and the particular entity using the system/method would be a matter of design choice.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the system/method of Campbell to include examining the authority of a user, as taught by Maners, and a user that is a supplier, as suggested by design choice, to provide various entities with access to a secure billing system.

Regarding claim 2, electronic mail is a well-known means for communication. Regarding claim 3, the system of Campbell includes means for operating account statements, payment, invoice files, etc. (par. 29-30, includes billing mechanism, means for generating statements and invoices). Regarding claim 4, the system includes means for consolidating data to determine the check sheet's accuracy (par. 29, data from different files is compared and a confirmation screen is displayed). Regarding claim 5, if the data is not accurate and up to date the billing data will not be confirmed. Regarding claim 7, the examining is to assure that the user is authorized to sign in to the system (password required). Regarding claim 8, the particular process to follow after access is denied would be a matter of design choice. Regarding claims 9 and 10, a dispute mark is generated (screen showing data not confirmed, call signal generated, par. 29, Campbell) when the data on the check sheet is not confirmed and a signal is dispatched to notify relevant personnel (at alternative billing center). Regarding claims 11-13, the nature of the data would be a matter of design choice.
